

A Song for the Horse Nation National Museum of the American Indian

Contact:
Jen Tozer
Smithsonian Institution
Fourth Street and
Independence Ave, SW
Washington, DC 20560

A Song for the Horse Nation presents the epic story of the horse's influence on American Indian tribes from the 1600s to the present. Drawing upon a treasure-trove of stunning historical objects – including ledger drawings, hoof ornaments, beaded bags, hide robes, paintings, and other objects—and pieces by contemporary Native artists, the exhibition reveals how horses shaped American Indian life. ELY crated and packed the objects for transport and assisted with the de-install.