In 2014, ELY provided expert collection relocation services for the National Park Service's (NPS) Clara Barton National Historic Site including the packing, crating, and transport of over 4,300 objects, such as framed artwork, ceramics, rugs/textiles, and furniture, as well as a significant archival collection. In order to manage such a large collections move, ELY used a coded inventory labeling system enabling the NPS staff to efficiently retrieve any object. We also designed and fabricated all artifact crates using museum and archival quality materials to protect all types of collection objects.
